

LOOKING FOR PAY AT THE AUBURN DEEP

Joe Reed, is home from the Auburn Deep Sinking company's property at the famous old camp of Auburn, where two shifts are working night and day, drifting at different levels from a shaft sunk in an old channel.

"We have the old channel on our property," said Mr. Reed, "and we know it. We have opened it at five different places and consequently knew its trend. The rims have been definitely outlined by exploration, and depth to Webfoot bedrock determined. We have not yet found the pay, which, of course, is along the bedrock, but no a shovelful has been taken out which fails to show gold. When we find the pay channel, which is liable to be any day, we will have a valuable property"

Survey at the Red Boy.

John Thomsen, acting manager of the Red Boy, and president of the May Queen mine, returned from Baker City this morning, accompanied by his wife. With him was J. Huffman, deputy county surveyor, who will do some engineering work at the Red Boy, in preparation for the reopening of that property by a reorganized company.
